3D Systems' FreshFiber Brings Phone Accessory Customization To CTIA

- Signs With Mobileistic, Master Dealer For AT&T And Sprint
- Demonstrates APP For In Store Personalization Of Phone Cases

ROCK HILL, South Carolina - May 8, 2012 – 3D Systems Corporation (NYSE:DDD) announced today that FreshFiber has begun selling its innovative range of 3D printed accessories through Mobileistic, a leading the New York based master dealer for AT&T and Sprint wireless accessories in the US. Mobileistic plans to exhibit the full FreshFiber accessories range at the wireless industry event, CTIA, in New Orleans, booth #2319.

FreshFiber 3D printed electronics accessories, such as iPhone cases, offer extraordinary design freedom, style and complete customization and individualization. During CTIA, FreshFiber will demonstrate for the first time, its new in-store APP using 3D Systems recently announced home 3D printer, Cube[®], to print personalized inserts for phone cases.

"At CTIA FreshFiber and Mobileistic will showcase just one of our planned co-creation APPs that empowers consumers to customize their electronics accessories at the point of purchase," said Cathy Lewis, Vice President Global Marketing for 3D Systems. "This is just a first teaser as we further enhance FreshFiber's portfolio, products and capabilities through our innovative technology and infrastructure."

About 3D Systems Corporation

About FreshFiber

FreshFiber is a European design label focused on bringing art and fashion to electronics devices like smartphones, tablets, and other gadgets we use on a daily basis. The production method is totally new to the accessories industry: designs are carefully fused into a shape by a laser, one layer at a time. This "3D Printing" allows for complete freedom of form and affordable personalization. It enables anyone to fully express their ideas and personality.
